

MIYETTI QUARTERLY LAW REVIEW

CALL FOR SUBMISSION

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE AND THE LAW

Deadline – 30th January 2018

The Miyetti Quarterly Law Review is published by Miyetti Research and Publications Limited as a peer reviewed journal with the aim of advancing theoretical and practical insights into legal issues arising from Nigerian Law, thereby making original contributions to legal knowledge. The articles are tailored to the Nigerian legal system with interdisciplinary law practices in focus. It also seeks to publish articles that address from comparative perspective developments in other jurisdiction which are relevant in furtherance of legal scholarship in Nigeria. The Editorial Board and crew are made up of established scholars and seasoned practitioners. We are pleased to present a call for submission of articles for this special issue on the theme: Artificial Intelligence and the Law.

New and innovative technologies are being embraced in rendering wide ranges of services. Artificial intelligence is one of the developments that have been moved the field of science and technology to meet the development of the modern society. The application of artificial intelligence in commercial transactions has been developed over time. In other areas such as medical practice, legal and other professional services, artificial intelligence is also soaring. There are therefore legal risks associated with artificial intelligence which will require it to be regulated within the confines of the law, business and scientific practices. Moral and article issues are a very important consideration in shaping how the law should be employed to check the likely risks. It is expedient that the field of legal practice should move with the revolution engendered by artificial intelligence. The developments in the field of artificial intelligence have raised critical legal issues and the need for the law to continue to play a role in this emerging area of science and technology that warrants the engagements of practitioners, legal and socio-legal scholars in the debate.

Miyetti Quarterly Law Review is bringing this call for papers to invite articles that robustly address but are not limited the following sub-themes:

- Domestic regulations and standards for artificial intelligence
- The international law measures to regulate artificial intelligence
- Legal services and artificial intelligence
- The legal profession and the use of artificial intelligence
- Professional and ethical issues in the use of artificial intelligence
- Legal issues arising from privacy rights and data protection
- Intellectual property rights issues in artificial intelligence
- Cybersecurity and artificial intelligence
- Jurisdictional issues and artificial intelligence
- Liability issues in artificial intelligence

The Miyetti Quarterly Law Review hereby invites contributions on legal issues arising from the above themes, which are nevertheless not exhaustive. Articles should be sent as a word document to editor@miyettiquarterlylawreview.com on or before 30th January 2018.

Contributors should ensure that their articles are well edited in clear language and must conform to the submission guidelines. Only well edited articles conforming to the guidelines attached will be considered for peer review.

Please note that every article submitted to Miyetti Research and Publications will be put through a PLAGIARISM check.
